

Dear Editors:

Thank you very much for your detailed modification and comments. We have revised our manuscript and here is a point-by-point reply to the comments.

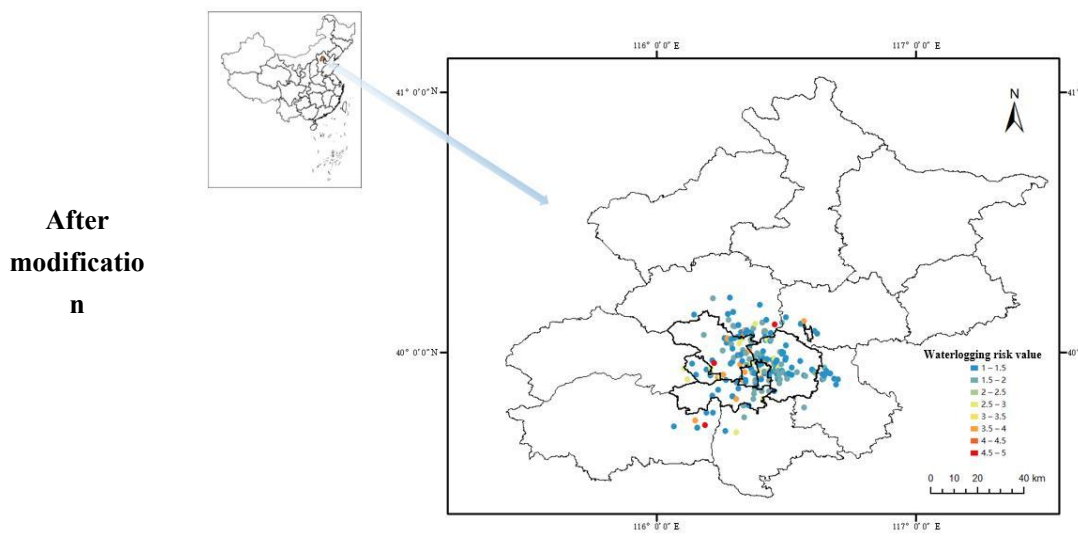

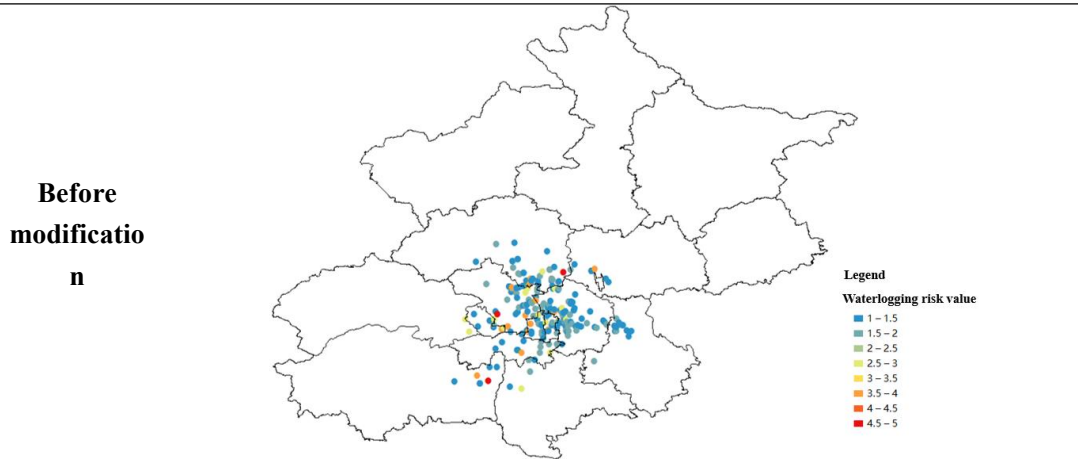

Comment:

There is a need to redo Figure 4 so that:

1. from the map readers can tell where the study site it - e.g. include where it is in China. So far there is no such a map.

2. include a scale bar and north arrow on the map.

These two changes should be straightforward. Looking forward to the final revised manuscript.

We have redrawn the Figure 4 mainly in the following points:

1. We have added a map of China in the upper left corner and marked the position of Beijing by red. The map is complete and includes Taiwan and the South China Sea area.
2. We have added the latitude and longitude on the map of Beijing to further tell readers the location of Beijing.
3. We have added a scale bar and north arrow on the map.
4. Compared to the width of overall contour line (0.4 pt), we marked the six districts we studied with a wider contour line (1 pt) to help readers better understand their location in Beijing.
